What We're Learning!

In reading, we have been learning the routines and habits of effective readers. We have learned the importance of reading "awake," keeping a log, and picking just right books (to name a few!). We have also discussed how to talk in partnerships and retell a book.

In writing, we have started writing personal narratives. We learned strategies of how to come up with a topic and what to do when we're "stuck." We also learned that writers should be storytellers and not reporters (and how to do it!). We picked our seed idea for our first published piece.

In math, we've worked on our addition and subtraction. We have solved story problems, investigated even and odd numbers, and learned the commutative and associative properties! We will start our new unit on place value next week.
