December 1st Jennings Journal

Hello Jennings.

I cannot believe that December is already here! This is a month that certainly has us running a bit ragged for multiple reasons. It is during this time that our kids can potentially feel the weight of being out of the typical routine. We know, as parents and educators, our kids do much better with structure in their day. It is important that you try and keep as many of the essential routines as possible. Do your best to keep the homework and bedtime routines and your kids will be much better off at school and at home.

This week we prepare to say farewell to Mrs. Chapman. She has been a positive part of our school for many years. We wish her the best as she begins her newest chapter. Her last day with us will be Friday, December 5th. We are pleased to let everyone know that the Health Department has been able to find a wonderful replacement. She will be transitioning with Mrs. Chapman this week and will begin with us officially on the 15th. I will introduce her in our next Journal. Please take a moment to thank Mrs. Chapman for taking such good care of us and to wish her the best...she will be missed greatly!

Have a wonderful week!

Mr. Vuolo

Progress Reports

The next two weeks the teachers will be diligently working to enter grades into the first progress report of the year. We ask that the parents check their Infinite Campus accounts to ensure they are able to log into the main portal prior to the release date of December 12th. It is important to note that the progress reports can only be viewed on the main portal and not on your mobile device. If you need any assistance please contact the main office for support.

Curriculum Corner

We all know finding time to do everything we want to do in a day can be very difficult! Reading with your child is a worthwhile activity we should all try to fit into our daily routines.
